DELEGATES AT LARGE.

As the time draws near for holding the republican state convention which will select delegates to the national convention at Minneapolis, the question of whom shall be chosen suggests itself. At Detroit, at the time of the Michigan club banquet, and frequently since, the question has been asked whether Grand Rapids would present a candidate for delegate at large. The position is one of honor rather than an office with a financial remuneration attached. While it is not every man that is willing to do it, it is a noble thing to do, and it is usually no dearth of candidates. The honor is one that should go to the active workers of a party—a loyal, hardworking republican and the friends of Wm. Alden Smith think he will about fill the bill. Mr. Smith's services to his party have extended into every congressional district in the state. He is young and splendidly represents that earnest, enthusiastic element in the party. He enjoys a state acquaintance second to none other, and he fully represents the younger element in the party if chosen to this high honor. As a public speaker he is entertaining and instructive, thoroughly comprehending the principle of the party, and the numerous demands for his services from the leading republicans in past campaigns highly attest his usefulness and value as a republican. He has loyally supported the candidacy of many of our most prominent republicans for the past ten years, and they will doubtless be glad to aid him in conferring this honor upon him now. His life strongly illustrates the possibilities of young men who start in the humbler walks of life and make a success. The Herald takes pleasure in recommending William Alden Smith for delegate at large.

APPEARANCE.

We are often told that appearance is everything and so they are. We read occasionally of instances where the handsome and lovely tramp does some human deed—where the dude turns out to be a miser and a coward, where the quiet man silences the noisy bully. In reality and in fiction the deeds of the lowly and humble in appearance are duly sung. All the world knows that there are as many men of quiet heroism done in every-day life by every-day people, of every-day appearance, a thousand to one, as ever see the light of public notice. All this does not excuse neglect of personal appearance. It is a duty that every young man, and every young woman owes to society, to themselves, and to their friends, to appear well. This does not mean an undue amount of attention to personal appearance; such is not needed. The millionaire who wears rusty clothes, and prides himself on it, finds as soon as he moves away from the walks where he is known, that he has cut out for himself a road of emulating and contemptuous treatment. This serves him right. Among strangers, our personal appearance is all there is to judge us by. It is the neatly dressed man who receives the most attention from hotel clerks, railway officials and porters. It is the well dressed man who receives courteous attention when he enters a place of business, a stranger. Courtesy of manner and neatness of attire are the most important elements in the make-up of a gentleman or lady, and it should be remembered that no amount of education will supply deficiencies in these respects. They are however the most indications of culture and general good bringing up.

NEW YORK HERALD.

There was a sharp encounter in the House today between ex-speaker Reed and Senator Crisp. Mr. Reed called the speaker's attention to the difference in rules governing this congress and its predecessor by ironically saying that "no quorum, and no quorum called" were different propositions. The speaker, however, ruled that there was "no distinction under the rules between no quorum and no quorum called." Congress is now in session under this rule, and the majority will frequently hear of a house called with a quorum on some member's failure to, and with the same member present and in their seats, but refusing to vote on some other measure, the speaker will say, "no quorum." This is out of the line of rig game, in which the speaker will occupy the honorable position of judge, and may be expected to call on at infrequent intervals. "Now you see it, now you don't."

compared with the enormous shipments made during the past few months. Owing to an advanced premium for gold throughout Europe, shipments still continue heavy. The fallures show a slight increase as compared with the corresponding week last year, but to offset this 91 per cent employed less than $500 capital, and 97 per cent did not exceed $20,000 capital. On the whole the condition of the country from a financial and commercial point of view is quite as prosperous as could be asked.

SHALL THEY LIVE OR DIE?

At this distance from the scene of the dispute, and not being directly interested in the seal fisheries, many look upon the efforts made to save seal life as more likely to strain the now pleasant relations existing between this country and Great Britain than to accomplish any good to the country at large. It is further argued that the fur of the seal is consumed only by the rich, and therefore not of importance to the masses. These reasons are tenable and should be given their full weight, but when we acquire Alaska and the islands adjoining in 1907 we also acquired an industry which if properly protected will yield a considerable revenue. After the acquisition of this territory the Prbyloff islands were leased to the Alaska commercial company at an annual rental of $60,000 and $2 additional for every seal taken, the catch being restricted to 100,000. British subjects, residents of Canada, almost immediately began depredations, and to protect the company in the rights granted, armed cruisers were sent into the waters to seize poaching vessels. This course brought a clamorous protest from the Canadians who claimed the United States were assuming a jurisdiction they had denied the Russian government in 1922. The matter finally became so serious that the two governments appointed a joint commissioner to visit these islands and report on the best methods of preserving seal life. In the interval a modus vivendi was agreed upon and last year armed cruisers of both powers patrolled the seas. Word now comes that the commission has failed to agree, and that Lord Salisbury has refused to continue the modus vivendi. Under these circumstances if we police the sea and seize foreign poaching vessels, international difficulties of a serious nature are threatened. If we do not police the sea, seal life will be rapidly becoming a thing of the past and the honor of our nation trailed in the dust.

GO SLOW.

In making up your mind that you are the most unfortunate person in the world; go slow. In believing discreditable things of others. Hate nobody whom you don't know, on mere "hearsay" of others. Go slow in giving confidence to a new made friend. Don't complain of bad luck, for the world will believe you unlucky, and the world has no use for an unlucky man. Have as many acquaintances as you please, but go slow in adopting friends, and if you find one reliable and true cling to him. Go slow in making up your mind, then act from a principle of right. Go slow in all the indulgences of life; there will come a day of reckoning with your body, if you abuse it. For the loss of health, neither riches nor fame will compensate. Go slow in acknowledging you are wrong, but if you once find you are wrong, hasten to make amends. Go slow in taking offense. An angry man is never a sensible man, nor a safe man.

TIPS ON THE PLAYS

The Present Week a Notable One Theatrically.

BERNHARDT IN "LA TOSCA"

"His Nibs the Baron" at Redmond's—The Bills at Smith's and Geary's. Other Stage Notes.

The theaters have flourished during the past week. In fact, business at Powers' for the past week has been unprecedentedly large and it must be acknowledged, to the credit of M. Mrs. Brady & Garwood, that the average of attractions offered during this time could not be surpassed anywhere. An increased appreciation of such offerings will stimulate the management to greater efforts, in securing the best there is in the theatrical world. The crowning event of the season of course, will be the appearance of Miss Bernhardt on next Wednesday evening. New plays and farces will be seen in all of the theaters, as will be observed by the subjoined announcements:

Powers—Sarah Bernhardt.

The advent of the divine Sarah promises to be the most unusual representation ever given in the city. She is the acknowledged queen of the stage and her realm the world; she has visited every portion of it and her subjects number millions. She will present on Wednesday evening, at Powers' Sardon's great play "La Tosca," which was written for this celebrated actress, a play for which she, above all others, is eminently fitted to represent. Her coming to Grand Rapids has created a notable and unusual interest. The interest in Sardon's great play is most intense from the very beginning, until the prostrate form of "La Tosca" lies down the ramparts of the side of the illustrious Marie Carvaldo. Marie had been a liberal. In earlier days the young nobleman and the pretty singer had been drawn toward each other. La Tosca is a light minded creature, prone to foolish jealousies; but with all her limitations of soul she can love, and it is this love which the monster Scarpia uses when he carries out his scheme to hunt down the escaped prisoner Angiolotti. Befriended by Mario, the refugee is taken to the noble's country villa, known only to La Tosca and a trusted servant. Scarpia suspects the truth. Angiolotti has assumed the disguise of a woman while in hiding at a church. The police officials find some of his belongings and ardently pursue the jealous Fiora that he has betrayed some other woman in her absence. La Tosca, furious with jealous rage, hurries to the villa and only comprehends the situation just as Scarpia and his followers have traced her to the scene. Inexorable and ferocious Scarpia puts Mario to the torture, and he compels La Tosca to reveal the hiding place of Angiolotti. La Tosca sees the fate of her lover, but is released from torture to see Angiolotti lying dead on the floor. He denounces La Tosca for revealing the secret, and is condemned to death for aiding Angiolotti to escape. The curtain falls on the plot of the taking off of Scarpia, and that final death which brings down the curtain. The play is picture esque, melodramatic and fatal, and the characterizations are brought out as never before. Sardon can write them and Sarah Bernhardt impersonate them.

Local Lobby Chatter.

The following letter is self explanatory: Grand Rapids, March 4.—C. Sumner Burroughs, Dear Sir:—In behalf of members of the "Children's Home Society," I wish to thank you for the help you have extended to us in our work by sending us a donation nearly every week since December 8, '31. Many a heart and home has been the happier this winter because of your generosity, for there are needs and urgent ones that old clothes cannot supply. A little ready money used with discretion has been an absolute necessity, so I can safely say that the society with the best of intentions and hard work could not have accomplished more than half of what they have, had it not been for the "Gray evening." As we call it. Again thanking you for past favors and hoping the Sunday evening audiences will be very large, I remain, most sincerely, Mrs. Cassius H. Sweet, president of C. H. S.

Powers—Barlow's Minstrels.

It seems, after a long season of melodrama, sentimental drama, and comedy, a change of time to announce the coming of a minstrel company. This company has been thoroughly reorganized, and many new features and specialties are proposed at Powers' tonight. The company in its entirety is made up of thirty people. A number of specialists have been engaged in Europe, and are said to present something entirely different from anything ever seen here. Among the principal members may be mentioned Billy Barlow, James Barlow, Larry May, Arthur Royer, Thompson and Dickey Baker and West, Arthur Le Bond, the Manhattan Quartette, the Leon Brothers, whose sensational acrobatic feats are said to be more than marvellous, and "Ferry" from the Folies Bergere, Paris. Special attention has been given to the act containing the numbers ten carefully selected voices.

Redmond's—"His Nibs the Baron."

Manager Burroughs will for the present week, commencing tonight, present to his numerous patronage a new comedy entitled "His Nibs the Baron." The manager of this company has conceived the idea of having two leading ladies, and there is no end to his troubles. Miss Marie Clayton claims that in spite of everything she is the only Simon pure looking lady of the show. She is a vivacious brunette, with a rather pretty face, though a non-committal as to her hair. Miss Lottie Winnett, who tells all of her friends that, as a matter of fact, she is the star of the company, and "that Clayton thing" is merely her under-study and merely a blonde. Miss Clayton is a blonde that she too might be a blonde if she cared to use the same method for achieving that result; but she is generally regarded as the jealous label of an envious rival, particularly by Miss Winnett's friends. The latter lady is quite large while Miss Clayton is rather small. It is stated by the advance agent that the two were really friends for several hours, but that since the company started on its travels their regard for each other has gradually grown cooler and cooler, and it is absolutely necessary to wear an under in their joint presence. The manager is sorely perplexed and resorts to all manner of schemes to keep out of their sight. This can be readily understood, as each of the rivals demand the best advantage in the house, theater dressing rooms and rail cars. There may be considerable curiosity in this week to see to what extent this jealous feeling corrodes their work in "His Nibs the Baron." Matinee as usual.

Geary's Museum.

An entire change in all departments is the announcement made by Manager Geary for the coming week. The prize baby show will be the principal feature in the museum hall, but the list of attractions to appear on the stage is exceptionally large and of good quality. Lou Morley, with his famous "Tale Morgana," will no doubt be the talk of the town. The exhibit is said to be the greatest of its kind in America. The two brothers, in a grand representation of the story of the olden times, will be a feature in the museum. The exhibit is said to be the greatest of its kind in America. tor; Sadler and Downey, the German dialect comedians, in their original conception, entitled, "Dutch Dudes," "Leonsa," the juggler; H. J. Abbott, character comedian, and last but not least, Master Eddie Abbott, the clever boy magician. The museum is open every afternoon and evening, first show in theater takes place at 2:15, second at 8:40, evening at 7:45 and 9:20.

Father Nugent's Lecture.

Rev. J. F. Nugent, the eloquent divine, is popularly known in Grand Rapids, having frequently appeared here on the platform, will lecture at Powers' grand on March 17. He comes here under the auspices of the Press club and the Ancient Order of Hibernians. His subject is one that will be in the minds of the world for many months to come, "Columbus." The reputation of the speaker as an orator and a scholar is such as to insure that the subject will be handled in an able and instructive manner.
